

Saving Spoons

Promoting Accessibility for DHH
Children and Families with Disabilities

Maddie Hinkle, Chicago Hearing Society

Amy Keslinke, IL Hands and Voices Guide By Your Side

EHDI 20 24

Maddie Hinkle

- BA English Literature (Oberlin College)
- MA Deaf Studies: Early Language Advocacy (Gallaudet University)
- DHH Educator
- Youth and Family Coordinator with CHS
- Disabled

Amy Keslinke

- Educator with experience from 3rd grade to adult education, including subbing in the DHH program through the Northwestern Illinois Association
- Mom of 2, one of whom is deaf
- Illinois Hands and Voices Guide By Your Side Board of Directors member
- Parent Facilitator for the Illinois Service Resource Center

Objectives

Participants will..

Consider observable and unobservable disabilities and how they may impact an individual's participation and inclusion in the service(s) they provide.

Participants will...

Gain a deeper understanding of the connection between deafness and additional disabilities and identify steps they can take to promote accessibility.

Participants will...

Leave with a checklist to take back to their workplace to start some conversations on promoting accessibility.

Spoon Theory

- Christine Miseradino, Beginning with Disability: A Primer (2018)
- Accessible on her blog

Reframing Practice:

Prioritizing Care

Homework Follow-Up

New Day, New
Spoons

Clinic Visit

Clinic Day

Prep

Childcare

Time off work/school

Packing

Travel

Parking

Feeding times

Entry

Appointment

Waiting area

Diaper/toileting

Space

Afterward

More travel

Stay or go?

Before the appointment

Scheduling

Often no or little choice;
struggle with time of day

Childcare

Other children usually not allowed

Time Off

Expense to take off work;
sacrifice to take off school

It's not just an hour

- Packing is required
- Feeding schedules
- Emergency meds
- Unknown amount of time
- Pick up/drop off other child

Before the Appointment

Before the Appointment

Travel

- The larger the facility, the worse the parking
- Unpredictable traffic = unpredictable arrival time
- May require a cushion for feeding
- Many doors are not handicap accessible

Waiting for Our Turn

- Medical waiting area = germs!
- Diaper/Toileting needs
- Space
- Unknown amount of time to contain a kiddo
- Late policies

During the Appointment

Parent has to focus, listen, and engage!

Getting an interpreter (usually on video) can be a challenge that makes the appointment take longer.

After the appointment

Stay or go?

Do we stay and eat or head for the hills?

Is there time?

Can we make it back to school/work/childcare?

Association

Making time for joy and
being a kid

But what about in-home services?

Many of these pieces still apply! Plus, there is the additional stress of feeling like your home, and therefore yourself, is on display.

The families you
engage with may be
literally running on empty.

Thank you!

Maddie

mhinkle@anixter.com

Amy

akeslinke.gbys@gmail.com

